SOCIETY NOTES AND NEWS

PRESIDENT"S CORNER

As I write this (mid-March), the Nominating Committee needs someone to serve as Vice President and someone to serve as Secretary for the year July 1980 through June 1981. Please call Mary Lou Barry at 769-5452 evenings or me at 662-3360 to volunteer. It might work out to have two people share the position of Secretary. The Secretary takes notes at Board meetings and general meetings, types up the notes and keep them on file. It's a good chance to learn about the activities of our Society. The Vice President is head of the program committee and thus has a first hand look at speakers and programs for our monthly meetings. Call now to volunteer so Mary Lou can stop worrying.

The cemetery committee recently completed it's Guide to Cemetery Reading and Transcribing. They did a fine job. Karen Walker, the head of the committee, Martha Kacanek, and Jan Tarolli are the committee members. Harold Jones is advisor to the committee. Thank you for a job well done. The committee's next project will be to set up a training session on how to read a cemetery.

The interest groups which have met so far--Pennsylvania; Ohio; New England; New York; and the Washington, D.C., Maryland, Kentucky, and the Virginias group--are a good chance to exchange information with someone working on an ancestor in a common state or region. That's one of the enjoyable activities of genealogy. How long since you've shown your ancestor chart to another genealogist? Call Nancy Warner at: 1-582-2336 for more information on the interest groups. Or drop her a postcard at 4110 Jonathon, Dearborn, 48126. Or call me.

See you at the Annual Meeting on May 18 in the Clements Library and at the picnic June 22 at Bob and Louise Anderson's.

--Phyllis Jones

I. - GENERAL INFORMATION

There is a tremendous amount of material of value to the genealogist available in the University of Michigan Library system. Of particular interest are the Bentley Library, the Clements Library, the Law Library and the Harlan Hatcher Graduate Library (the HHGL). In this article I will give you some odds and ends of information that might help you to utilize this latter resource.

Before getting down to such nuts and bolts topics as where it is and how it is laid out, I'd like to cover some general information about using it. The HHGL is one of the best libraries in the United States--in the world for that matter. While they are oriented towards serving the needs of students and staff at the University, there is no restriction that excludes people not affiliated with the University. Signs direct people to the Circulation Department to apply for a user pass. These passes are issued freely. If you do not want to apply, however, as a practical matter it is not really necessary to do so. Assuming you behave with a modicum of decorum you will not be questioned! Because the Library serves the needs of so many it is often crowded. The best times to go are early mornings; that way you will be assured of finding seating; otherwise, you may find yourself sitting on the floor to read your book! Except for vacation periods, and, perhaps, shortened hours during the summer, the hours are:

8 a.m. to midnight Monday - Thursday
8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday
10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday
1 p.m. to midnight Sunday

Unless you are a student or staff member at the University of Michigan you will not be permitted to take materials out of the building (of course that is something genealogical researchers are used to). You should keep in mind, however, that people who are affiliated with the University can take material out, so if a book is not on the shelf it is worth your time to check and see if it is charged out (more on that later). The Interlibrary Loan Department will handle only requests based on academic needs; your public library will handle Interlibrary loan (ILL) requests for you.

II. - LOCATION

The HHGL is located on the Diag on the main campus area. It is actually two building joined at various places. The NORTH building (old building) faces the Diag; the SOUTH building (new building) faces South University Avenue. To enter the North building, go through the doors that face the Diag. To enter the South building use the walkway that goes between the President's House and the Clements Library (right where Tappan Street ends at South University). Whichever entrance you use, go to the second level; the buildings do not join at ground level.

III. - SECOND FLOOR

The second level is the heart of the Library. If you go to the red carpeted area of this level you will be in the North Building. The area through the glass doors is the South Building. Joining these two buildings is the Public Catalog--a room easily recognized because it is filled with (what else?) card catalogs.

A. Card Catalog

I tend to use a browsing approach to the HHGL. There is so much there and it is so exciting to have the book right in front of me, I find I don't want to spend my time in that goldmine going through catalog drawers. However, there are serious drawbacks to that approach.

The collection is so huge that there is no way you can "browse" the whole thing. In addition, a lot of the material is not even on the shelf--it may be a microform or in a special collection (such as the Rare Book Room), it may be in storage, or it may be charged out. The only way you would ever know if the library had a particular book would be through the catalog. There is a librarian available to assist you if you can't determine which subject heading to check. It may take time and patience to ferret out the subject headings of use to you, but it will be worth the effort.

Sometimes a call number will have a notation that indicates it is not in the building, or is in a special collection in the building. An example of the former would be "Michigan Historical Collections," or "William A. Clements Library." The latter might be "North Campus Storage" or "Rare Book Room." When this happens, just take the information to the person at the desk and s/he will tell you how you can obtain access to that book. It may mean a wait of a day or two, or a walk upstairs, or even across campus, but it is usually possible to get the book.

Once you know the book is in the collection, use the chart to see what floor it is on. If the book is not on the shelf, do not despair--it's somewhere! And chances are they can find it. Go to 2 South and into the red carpeted lobby area. You will see two or three microfiche readers on a high table. These readers contain microfiche that list in call number order all books off the shelves. Look up the book you want by it's call number, then consult the chart on the table to explain the codes. If it is somewhat puzzling at first, don't worry--just copy all the information down and take it to the Circulation Department. That department is on Level 1 of the North Building--through the glass doors just outside the Reference Room and down one flight. They will tell you when and how the book can be obtained.

B. Microform Room

The Microform Room is located in the North Building (red carpeted area). It contains readers and reader-printers for the microform collection housed in it. The microforms are (with a few exceptions) in closed stacks and must be paged through the desk. To do this you must use the card catalog, which is to the right of the desk. So far in this collection I have found the following items of value to genealogical research:

The U.S. Census Schedule for Michigan, 1830-1900. This is one of the few items not in the closed stacks. You can retrieve the rolls yourself from the metal cabinet by the desk. If you need help using one of the machines, a staff member will assist you. The Soundex reels are in the cabinet too. The catalog for the LDS Library is in this collection, but I am not sure that it is the most current one. To use it you need to find the film number (it is #14629), and then look up that film number in the shelflist to get the reel you need. The catalog is arranged by place and subdivided by topic. Again, a staff mem b er will assist you.

My most recent--and exciting--discovery was that there are two drawers in the catalog that list U.S. Newspapers and selected periodicals by state. Some of these are 18th century newspapers, and there are quite a few 19th century ones. On the upper left hand corner of the card is the call number to use to retrieve the microform. You will discover that many of these call numbers start with "APS" or"Micro P X-15." Both of these refer to sets worth mentioning. APS refers to the American Periodicals 1741-1900. In addition to the cards in the drawer which index this set, there is a book index to this collection. This book index is worth looking at (ask for it at the desk; MRA4). It is an alphabetical listing by title of each item in the collection, with a good general description of what is contained in the publication. There is also a subject index, but that will not be of much help. If you read the descriptions, however, you will come across such interesting notations as "...a moral and religious section (in The Observor pub. 1809 in N.Y.) some poetry, brief news items, and marriage and death notices." Or for the Methodist Review, published 1818-1831, we find a description that includes such topics as "...Divinity, Biography, Scripture, and Obituaries." Two items of more readily obvious value are the New England Historical and Genealogical Register (Vol. 1-59) and the American Historical Register and Monthly Gazette. The Micro P X-15 call number refers to a microprint (opaque microcard) collection of American newspapers to 1820. It is not a comprehensive collection, but there are some exciting finds. Anything in this collection is indexed in the card catalog drawer by state. There is no separate index to the set. For example, if you looked under Connecticut in the drawer you would find several cards. Looking for the New London Gazette you would get the call number Micro-P X-15 CT-2, which you would then request at the desk.

C. Reference Room and Union Catalogs

If you walk past the copy machines and turn left you will be entering the Reference Room. Straight ahead is the desk of the Reference Librarians. These librarians are not experienced in genealogy research, but for more general information they are very helpful. To see what is in the Reference Room, go to the left and circle the room. The material is shelved along the walls in call number order. Immediately to your left are the Atlases. Following the Atlases are the Pre-1956 Imprints (more on those under Union Catalogs at the end of this section). Then the call numbers begin. Some items you may be interested in are as follows:

CD 3065K58 - Kirkham. Survey of American Church Records
CS call numbers - basic reference works on genealogy research, the Compendium, books on surnames
CT call numbers - biographical information on noted Americans, as well as those from some other countries
E call numbers - include some biographical works. One set of interest here is E 176 B5731 Biographical Directory of Governors of the U.S.
F 221 S597 - Swem. Virginia
F 566 - works on Michigan biography
Z 5313 - bibliographic works on genealogy, including Jacobus and the Catalog of Genealogies in the Library of Congress. (see section on Union catalogs)

Union Catalogs

As you leave the Reference Room and turn to your left, you will note shelves of large sets (this is in the red carpet area again). Under Z881 you will find subject catalogs for material in the Library of Congress. The Genealogies Catalog in the Reference Room is for family genealogies. The subject catalogs can be used for more general topics. Using these two book catalogs it is possible to get bibliographic information on books of interest to you. Once you have that information you can use the NUC (shelved by the subject catalogs) or the Pre-56 Imprints (remember that set by the Atlases in the Reference room?) to find out which libraries in the nation have the book in question. I didn't go into a detailed description of how to use these sets to get the information, because your best bet is to ask a Reference Librarian how to use them. Often a book is owned by a library that will lend on Interlibrary loan. Always try the non-genealogy oriented libraries. Your local public library then will submit an ILL request form for you.

D. Index Room and Document Room

Both of these rooms are off the red carpeted lobby area. The Index Room contains little of use to the genealogist, but a few things I have found in there that might be helpful are the newspaper indexes. Most are for the late twentieth century, but The New York Times is indexed from 1851 and the Times of London from 1790. There is also an index to the Virginia Gazette, 1736-1780. I have not done any research yet in the Documents Room, but, of course early documents are helpful to genealogy research. There is a Documents Librarian who might be of help in learning how to use those early documents.

E. Serials Service

Go through the elevator lobby and through the glass doors and you will be in the South Building. The Serials Service contains unbound periodicals, mostly of an academic nature. In the F call numbers however, are the state history periodicals, which may be of use to genealogical research. Once periodicals are bound they go to the stacks under their respective call numbers. The stacks in the Serial Service are open; you may walk in and browse. The call number arrangement of the shelves is readily apparent. Periodicals must be read in that confined area, but there are copy machines available for copying.

IV. - MAP ROOM AND RARE BOOK ROOM

The map room is on the 8th floor of the South Building. There are all kinds of maps in this room, as well as a collection of atlases and gazatteers. I haven't been able to explore this room much because it is only open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, but its potential use to a genealogist is obvious. It has it's own catalog and a Map Librarian is on duty to assist users.

V. - LEAVING THE BUILDING

You go back to the first level to leave--either North or South Building. On your way out be sure to stop by the charge station and pick up one of the several handouts containing information on the layout of the building, the hours, special collections and other such instructional tidbits. As you leave, you will not be delayed by inspection of purses, briefcases, etc. as there is an electronic security system at each exit.

Parts VI and VII of this article will be a "teaser" bibliography of the material on Levels 4 and 5 of the South Stacks. I call it a teaser because there is no way I can list everything that might be beneficial to your research--just some titles to perk your interest. If you are all ready to go now however, by all means explore it on your own. I'll just drop a few clues to get you started--go to the "CS" call numbers on 4 South and the "F" call numbers on 5 South. I think you'll stumble upon some gratifying finds.

GENEALOGICAL DATA FROM THE PENNSYLVANIA CHRONICLE, 1767-1774. by Kenneth Scott Ed. Kenneth Scott, National Genealogical Society, Washington, D.C., 1971.

William Goddard (1740-1817) published the Pennsylvania Chronicle for seven years, ending in 1774. Originally, the Chronicle was established as a spokespiece for the Anti-Proprietary Party. Mr. Goddard also included notices of marriages of prominent persons and deaths of prominent persons located in Pennsylvania and the other colonies.

"Advertisements provided information about deserters, runaway apprentices, slaves, redemptioners and convict servants, with names of masters and their places of residence. Very often the place of origin, age and trade of a runaway or deserter were set forth. Sometimes news was sought by relatives of members of their family who had come to America, while attorneys frequently were in quest of missing heirs.

"Real estate offered for sale in many instances produces detailed information concerning the late residence of decedents and names their executors or administrators, who also often advertised that accounts should be settled with them.

"The approximately 3600 persons listed in the Index are predominently from Pennsylvania, New Jersey (which had no newspaper at this period), Maryland and the three lower counties on Delaware. There appear, however, many persons from New England, Virginia, the Carolinas, New York, Georgia and East Florida. It is hoped therefore that this material will be of genealogical use."

The names are listed year by year, but are not alphabetized. The Index is alphabetized by surnames and given names. This book can be found in the GSWC Library.
